There are different kinds on based on different topics namely - Controversial topics, knowledge-based topics, abstract topics & conceptual topics.

"What should be the official language of India?"

We had a healthy and in depth discussion of this topic among 6 of us where there was different opinions and beliefs to which advocated and made us think different possibilities. We thought about having English as the official language but it wasn't the language spoken by majority of the population and then we discussed why not Hindi. We couldn't reach a final conclusion why in the first place we need to have one official language. Discussion went in depth of certain issues and topics but didn't cover all the problems, affects and possibilities in ~~its~~ breadth.

Everyone in the group was interactive and expressed their opinion clearly and firmly and at the same time were patient to listen to other people.

I learned to stay calm when put on the spot. I learned the importance of framing the statements and question carefully in order to convey your thoughts clearly and without any bias. Using facts and having some topic related knowledge helped back up my statements.
